He thought he had the right, and that this Tombs spoke. It had been asserted that he and no right to call in question the acts of sovereign States. He thought he had the right, and that this was the peculiar and appropriate place to call in question the acts of the confederate States. If redress could not be obtained here the States would be thrown upon their own resources. He had not arranged the domestic institutions or internal affairs of any State. He had only arranged them for infidelity to the Constitution which they were bound by every consideration of good faith to carry out. He had charged several States with being unfaithful to their compact, and of having made a supreme law of the land of no effect. None of them decied these charges except the Senator from Lowa, and he would show that he was wrong. The excess given was that the Fugi ive Stave Law was no law. There must be an arbiter somewhere in the case of this conflict. If the cannon is the only arbiter the Senator will know it the better. The Senator from this had defended the action of his State. Now Wisconsin had not only set aside a decree of the U. S. Court, but had antilified a provision of the Constitution itself. The provision of the Constitution in regard to the rendition of fugitives from labor was plain beyond cavil. There was no analogy between the action of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin and that of Georgia quoted by the Senator from Wisconsin and that of Georgia quoted by the Senator from Wisconsin and that of Georgia quoted by the Senator from Wisconsin and that he had no right to decide upon the constitutionality of a U. S. law, but on the ground that she had no right to decide upon the constitutionality of a U. S. law, but on the ground that she had no right to decide upon the constitutions in the only of the Constitution. He supperted his argument by copious citations from legal authorities. In the course of his remarks he said it was useless to sing peans to the Union while while they trampled the union under foot. less to sing peans to the Union while while they trampled the union under foot.—

Wisconsin simply asserted that the Federal Courts had no supremacy over State Courts.— Nine judges of the Supreme Court and there was a new doctrine in American jurisprudence. The action of the Wisconsin courts stood in its naked deformity without a parallel. In reply to Mr. Hale he said the ordinance of 1787 seed before this government was framed and therefore rested upon no constitutional authority. The opinions of the early fathers were LOUISVILLE, Feb. 27. On Saturday last a man calling himself John On Saturday last a man calling himself John Haskell, of Massachusetts, (others say he is an Englishman and a sailor recently from New Orleans,) 42 years old, was arrested for practising sodomy on three boys. His examination to day the Trust Lands west of Mo., set apart for the N. Y. Indiann, whether the same has been brought into market as a part of the public domain, and if so, by what authority.

Mr. Gurley said these resolutions are an invovation to former practice.

The Committee propose not only to largely reduce the number of volumes, but to exclude the dry statistice, instead of sending out three for the dry statistice, instead of sending out three for four volumes as heretofore.
